Congress Considers Road System Plans

Senate Committee Takes Up National Measure Providing for Main Highways to Be Constructed Outright by the Federal Government.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—At a conference held recently, called by Senator Townsend, the incoming chairman of the senate committee on postoffices and post roads, consideration was given by men prominent in national affairs to a national measure providing for a connected system of main highways to be constructed outright by the federal government.

In the closing days of the Sixty-fifth congress Senator Townsend introduced a measure for a national highways system with a view to a reintroduction of the measure at the succeeding session of congress, taking advantage in the meantime of all constructive thought, so that the bill might as nearly as possible fully meet national needs. Constructive suggestions have been brought out to such an extent as to assure a comprehensive and well balanced measure which if enacted into law will result in a national system of highways, built and maintained by the federal government under the supervision of a commission dealing exclusively with this one phase of national activity.

While the conference was made up of individuals prominent in the national field, it was strikingly evident that the men present represented a preponderating public sentiment throughout the nation. Roy D. Chapin, former chairman of the highways transport committee of the Council of National Defense, took a prominent part in the conference, as did T. C. Atkeson, member of the executive committee of the national grange; Elliott C. Goodwin, general secretary of the chamber of commerce of the United States; George P. Coleman, chairman of the executive committee of the American association of state highway officials; George C. Diehl, chairman of the good roads board of the American Automobile association; S. M. Williams and H. G. Shirley, president and secretary, respectively, of the highway industries association and the federal highways council; Pyke Johnson, secretary of the highways committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and representative of the National Automobile Dealers' association; W. O. Rutherford, representing the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' association; J. E. Pennypacker, formerly chief of management of the bureau of public roads and now director of roads of the American Automobile association; A. R. Hirst, president of the American Association of State Highway Officials. Other state highway officials present were Col. W. D. Uhler, chief engineer Pennsylvania state highway department; Paul D. Sargent, chief engineer Maine state highway department; Max L. Cunningham, state engineer of Oklahoma; and W. S. Keller, state highway engineer of Alabama, and Ira R. Browning, state road engineer of Utah.

Predominating sentiment was expressed as to the necessity for a comprehensive and specific national policy in regard to highways.

TOLEDO SCENE OF RIOT BY OVERLAND STRIKERS

TWO KILLED AND SEVERAL ARE INJURED IN CLASH WITH SPECIAL POLICEMEN.

By the Associated Press
TOLEDO, O., June 4.—Operations at the Willys-Overland Automobile plant are at a standstill today as the result of the rioting late last night in which two persons were shot to death and seventeen injured. The plant opened a week ago Monday after a two weeks idleness.

Coroner Walter Hartung has promised an investigation into the deaths in an effort to establish responsibility for the rioting. Feeling in the neighborhood where the killings occurred is running high. Labor disturbances at the plant involves the status of about 13,000 employees.

Gov. Cox was appealed to by the mayor to send troops but since the state has no troops at this time it may be necessary to ask for federal troops to maintain order.

The Riot.
TOLEDO, O., June 4.—Two are dead and five persons were seriously injured, two probably fatally, in a riot at the plant of the Willys-Overland Automobile company tonight.

The riot was a result of the labor disturbance involving 13,000 workers. The plant opened a week ago after two weeks idleness. Discharged soldiers, acting as guards at the plant, fired more than 100 shots over the heads of the rioters, finally dispersing them.

Violence started early in the day when crowd of idle workers stormed the plant, smashed the car windows with stone and bricks and pulled the workers into the streets where they were beaten.

The situation flamed into a pitch-battle tonight when idle workers numbering 5,000 including many women, stormed the entrances of the plant, as the employees were leaving, beat them with clubs, and felled them with a shower of stones and bricks.

STRONGLY SUSPECTED THAT LENINE AND TROTSKY HAD A HAND IN OUTRAGES.

By the Associated Press
PITTSBURGH, June 4.—Evidence that the anarchists responsible for the bomb explosions at the homes of Judge W. W. S. Thompson and W. W. Sibray, bureau of immigration inspector, were operating under orders from Russian radical headquarters at 133 Fifteenth St., New York, was in the hands of the police this morning. According to this morning's announcement, John Johnson, president of the local I. W. W. organization, came to Pittsburgh from New York weeks ago under orders from "Number 1001". William Haywood, national I. W. W. president, according to the bureau of police, holds pass No. 1001. Johnson, according to the police, was the directing genius of the bomb plot in this city.

Various circumstances connected with the outrages point to a plot engineered by the Lenin-Trotsky regime and possibly by German sympathizers. It is believed that much of the money was supplied by the Russian reds.

France and England Leading in Roads

America Treats Problem as One for Sectional Rather Than National Consideration—Federal Highway Commission Urged.

That the highway policy of the United States is not as flexible nor as well suited to meet the requirements of modern transportation as those of either France or England, was the statement made recently by Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the highways committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who directed the work of the highways transport committee of the Council of National Defense during the war period.

"In view of the greatly stimulated interest in highway development in this country, it is interesting to note that both France and England are far ahead of us in their administration of road funds," said Mr. Chapin.

"France, for example, has recently appropriated $152,000,000 for the repair and upkeep of 65,000 miles of roads and the national government, which has always retained full control of the construction and maintenance of main highways, has gone a step further and has taken over the secondary system as well. This is in direct contrast to our present plan of operation, which in effect, distributes a sum of $273,000,000 over a three-year period or any part of 2,500,000 miles of road which local authorities may deem advisable, thus dividing control and spreading expenditures over an enormous mileage.

"A technical committee has been appointed to determine the kind of material necessary for each type of road and it is also probable that there will be a reclassification of highways according to recent advice from France.

"The French problem is, of course, more acute in a sense than ours since thousands of miles of roadways were demolished during the war and must be replaced. But this very need which has caused the French government to assume full control in order to provide for the most efficient expenditure of every penny, is an indication of the course which the United States government should take. This it cannot do as long as we have a law which appropriates monies among states and does not legally recognize the actual need for a national highway system which is now confronting us as a consequence of the enormous increase in interstate highway traffic.

"English authorities have also adopted an advanced stand in their treatment of the highway problem. The national government has appropriated $50,000,000 for use on national highways, requiring therewith a measure of local aid, but always holding national policies and purposes in the foreground. The entire subject of transportation has been made the subject of an elaborate investigation and it is not improbable that out of this will come sweeping changes in policies of administration, operation and construction of highways.

"In this country we have been content to treat the problem as one for sectional rather than national consideration instead of taking into account both elements.

"We can no longer continue this course without waste and inefficiency and the more quickly we adopt a plan of administration calling for a national highway system and a federal highway commission, the better off the country will be.

"The subject is one which should be brought to the attention of every congressman for enactment into law at the next session of congress."

CHRISTIAN PEOPLE PLAN NEW EDIFICE

CHRISTIAN PEOPLE PLAN 24
The trustees of the first Christian church were, on yesterday, commissioned by the elders and deacons to begin work on a plan looking to the erection of a new church edifice for that rapidly growing congregation.

The building now occupied by the Christian people has been inadequate for some time, but the plans to erect a new building were halted some time ago on account of the war and the consequent exorbitant price of all building material.

It is thought now that the church building will be erected on the corner of Thirteenth and Broadway, the one now being used by the church as a parsonage.

AERIAL JOYRIDES POPULAR IN BRITAIN AT $10 A HOP-OFF

LONDON, June 4.—England is now engaging in aerial joyrides to its heart's content. The taste of sky flying given by special dispensation of the air ministry during the Easter holidays indicated that joy rides in the clouds will be more popular than jazz or cricket—almost as popular as tea.

Father and mother and sister Susie brought their two guineas—$10—proudly to the aerodromes for the first time on Good Friday. It was a beautiful day, a record day for British climate, and commercial flying started without an accident, but with many "Ohs" and "Ahs" and "Quites" and "Jollies," all the superlatives of the English language as spoken in its own home town.

"Better than to zoo," "Like nothing on earth," "Really, we must do it again," read the verdicts of the common people who had $10 and spent it wisely in convincing themselves that they were born flyers.

At Cricklewood granddama went up in a gigantic Handley-Page bombing machine, one that had been fitted for bombing Berlin and had not been altered except that the bombs were unloaded. She came down with the expressed hope that she would be able to fly to Brighton the next week, but she remained nameless.

Thousands paid two shillings to get inside the enclosure to have a closer view of the daring commoners. The holders of the two guinea tickets were the center of all eyes. They took off their coats and hats and bundled themselves in leather coats and caps, and were snapped by the photographers as though they were on their way to be executed. Six or eight passengers were taken at a trip. The machine, properly equipped, would carry many more, but the Berlin bombing gear of war time had not been removed and this restricted passenger space. Two or three children went up during the day, and coming down showed an enthusiasm for the sport that may become more expensive for dad than the movies or riding the elephant in the zoo.

One passenger hastened from his plane to inquire of the officials if there was any reduction for a "season ticket." The manager explained commercial air travel hadn't reached that stage yet. The rector of a Devonshire parish of 200 persons made the trip and described it for an enterprising London paper. One new paper which announced drawing of lots for five free rides received 3,554 applicants in two days.

Two hundred were carried from this one aerodrome the first day and after that they were lined up like a bus queue.

When Wilson Lectured for $15.

"July 20, 1889, Professor W. Wilson lecturer, $15." This is recorded in the cash book of the Laurel Park Chautauqua Association of Northampton, Mass., that the man, whose utterances today are cabled to the ends of the earth in order that the world may gauge its own progress, at one time received a paltry sum of money for lecturing before that culture-seeking body.

Recourse to the program of the assembly for that year throws further light upon the lowliness of the estate of Professor W. Wilson. He was scheduled to speak at 10 in the morning, an hour usually given to little-known speakers, since but few people are on hand to listen to them. Furthermore, the subject of his lecture was not given. His fellow lecturers, who were accorded better places on the program that their eloquence and erudition might edify their audiences, were George Makepeace Towle, before whose name the prefix Hon. appears; the Rev. Dr. Robert Nourse, T. DeQuincy Tully and the Rev. J. H. Mansfield, among others. Where are they today? One can not help but ask.

Maybe there was something occult in the fact that Professor W. Wilson was followed on that fateful day by the Hon. George Makepeace Towle. Note the middle name. To be sure it is reminiscent of Thackeray and it possible that the glamour of it added a bit to the attractiveness of Mr. Towle; but it is made up of two good English words—make peace. Whether Wilson noticed it or not, we find him today making peace and in a fair way toward succeeding in making that peace permanent.

There were, however, included in the program two men who are prominent today, President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University and Professor C. T. Winchester of Wesleyan University.

Turning to the newspaper account of the assembly's proceedings on that day we find that Professor W. Wilson of Wesleyan University delivered a lecture on "A Literary Politician, Walter Bagehot." Ten o'clock that morning was primary teachers' hour, and it may be wondered whether any one of the primary teachers who were present to hear him had the slightest inkling that she was listening to a man destined to be a far greater literary politician than the subject of his discourse. It may also be wondered whether the speaker himself had even the faintest prescience of the place he was later to fill. How interesting it would be if one could go back to that assembly and, armed with the knowledge of Wilson's greatness today, listen to the young professor give his estimate of a man who was to prove his own prototype.

TWO LAKES YIELD VAST QUANTITIES OF EPSOM SALTS

On Kruger mountain in the state of Washington, within a few miles of each other, are two lakes, one on each side of the international boundary, from which large amounts of natural epsom salts have been mined and shipped. Says a writer in the Mining and Scientific Press (San Francisco):

"Photographs of the lakes, made in connection with a study of the occurrence by Olaf P. Jenkins, suggest a snow-covered field with dark areas, nearly circular, and occupying about half the total area. The dark spots are shallow pools of brine, immediately beneath which are solid rocklike masses of epsomite. The areas between the spots are white and consist of efflorescent salts resting on black mud. During the rainy season the rise of water in the lakes causes the spotted appearance to vanish. The smaller of the lakes is in Washington, and contains nearly pure magnesium sulfate.

"The Canadian lake contains sodium sulfate (Glauber salts) mixed with magnesium sulfate. Other lakes in the vicinity show a predominance of sodium sulfate. Rocks in the vicinity contain pyrite and pyrrhotite. These may, upon oxidation, have produced sulfates, which reacted with the magnesia and lime of the rocks. This view is supported by the fact that between the epsomite and the underlying metamorphic rocks is a thin layer of gypsum.

"A point of much interest is the expansive force with which a saturated solution of the epsom salts crystallizes upon a sudden drop in the temperature. This was sufficient to split a three-inch iron pipe from end to end. It was also found that crystallizing salts could not be kept in wooden tanks, as the solution would work into the cracks and upon crystallization would open the joints. Such tanks had to be lined with metal."

The Franchise in Japan. The franchise in Japan is exercised by about twenty-seven per 1,000 of the population, or one voter in every thirty-six. Still another way of illustrating the restricted nature of the franchise is to contrast the number of males of voting age with the number on the voters' list. In 1913 there were over 13,000,000 males who could qualify as far as age was concerned, but out of that number only 1,500,000 were on the list, or one in every nine. But startling as are these figures, they do not tell the whole truth about the restriction upon the Japanese franchise. In the large industrial cities a vote has nothing like the power it has in the country or the smaller country towns. Thus Osaka, with 1,400,000 population, sends six members to the Diet, while Kochi, with just less than 40,000, sends one representative and Yamanashi prefecture with a population of 619,000, elects five members. Putting these figures in another way, the industrial population of Osaka, the great manufacturing city in Japan, sends one member to the lower house for every 233,333 inhabitants; Yamanashi, one for 123,800, and Kochi, one for every 40,000. This example is not an extreme one, and fairly represents the discrimination against the industrial classes which is involved in the distribution of the seats among the various election districts.—Asia Magazine.

INDIAN BALL GAME TO BE PLAYED HERE

This game is known to the Indian only in a professional way, and is played only by the Five Civilized Tribes, Creeks, Seminoles, Cherokees, Choctaws and Chickasaws, therefore leaving something like 100 tribes of Indians that know nothing about this particular game.

The uniforms worn in the game is a brite clout with fancy colorings of different kinds sewed on to the breech clout, an eagle feather is sometimes tied to the head, unusually a red fringe is worn around the neck, outside of the ball sticks and above the body is naked, not even wearing shoes or moccasins, but barefooted.

The sticks are usually about three feet long and are made out of second growth hickory or pecan. They are well seasoned and then cut down to about one inch thick. The cup end is so cut that the end bends back and makes a cup and is tied with buckskin then a lattice work is put in in order to hold and keep the ball from slipping through. And they are not allowed to touch the ball with their hands but use only the sticks.

The ball is made and covered with a squirrel skin while green so when the skin dries it shrinks and this makes the ball very hard, and it is about the size of a 10c India rubber ball. In a game usually a small feather is stuck in the ball in order that it may be thrown accurately and this affords wings for the ball, therefore affording great distance in throwing. However, sometimes the balls are lost and it becomes necessary for them to use anything in size.

The game can be played with any amount of players from six men on a side up to as many as can get in handy, just so they are equally divided. Those of you that have seen basket ball games, this game is played on the same principles. Only the goals are about the same distance apart as foot ball goals, and are about 15 feet high and three feet wide. The teams are divided up into three squads, forwards, centers and guards. Just before the game starts they each give their game song by marching around their goals, with the captain in front leading the song. The followers break out in whooping, dancing and taking on in a jubilee, this being the dare to the opposite side. After each team has put on their songs and dares they each at once know their places and take them at once. The ball is hoisted by the referee in the center and the game is on. The game is played continually until twenty points are made, then the game is over. When the ball is thrown through the goals it counts one point. The winners again pull off their song and dares as a demonstration of rejoicing over the victory while the defeated stand and take their medicine.

You will be given a chance to see a game of this kind in Ada, June 6th. It is a game of the past and everyone should see it.

Notice O. E. S. There will be a regular meeting of the Eastern Star tomorrow night. All members are urged to attend as matters of great importance are to be taken up.—Mrs. Edith M. Lee, Secretary.

The Characteristics of A Good Grocery Store

We have studied the grocery business for many years and are convinced that a successful store must be governed by principles from which there can be no deviation. In our store these rules are considered by each and every employe as being inviolable:

- First: To treat every customer, both in the store and over the telephone, with as much courtesy as if he or she were a guest in our home.
- Second: To offer nothing for sale that is not in the pink of condition and behind which we cannot put our absolute guarantee of SATISFACTION OR MONEY REFUNDED ON RETURN OF PURCHASE.
- Third: To see that every person is served to his satisfaction—not ours.
- Fourth: To deliver our customers' goods as promptly as possible.
- Fifth: —and by no means the least essential in a grocery store—to keep our place of business scrupulously clean.

These are the principles that govern this store, day in and day out, the year round.

That Old Sweetheart of Mine

As one who cons at evening o'er an album all alone,
And muses on the faces of the friends that he has known,
So I turn the leaves of fancy until in shadowy design
I find the smiling features of an old sweetheart of mine.

The lamplight seems to glimmer with a flicker of surprise,
As I turn it low to rest me of the dazzle in my eyes,
And light my pipe in silence—sure a sigh that seems to yoke
Its fate with my tobacco and to vanish with the smoke.

'Tis a fragrant retrospection for the loving thoughts that start
Into being are like perfumes from the blossom of my heart;
And to dream the old dreams over is a luxury divine
When my truant fancy wanders with that old sweetheart of mine.

Though I hear, beneath my study, like a fluttering of wings,
The voices of my children and the mother as she sings,
I feel no twinge of conscience to deny me any theme
When care has cast her anchor in the harbor of a dream.

In fact, to speak in earnest, I believe it adds a charm
To spice the good a little with a little dust of harm;
For I find an extra flavor in memory's mellow wine—
It but makes me drink the deeper to that old sweetheart of mine.

A face of lily beauty, with a form of airy grace,
Floats out of my tobacco as a genii from the vase
And I thrill beneath the glances of a pair of azure eyes
As glowing as the summer and as tender as the skies.

I can see the pink sun bonnet and the little checkered dress
She wore when first I kissed her, and she answered the caress
With the written declaration that "as surely as the vine Grew around the stump" she loved me—that old sweetheart of mine.

And again I feel the pressure of her slender little hand,
As we used to talk together of the future we had planned,
When I should be a poet, and with nothing else to do
But write the tender verses that she set the music to.

When we should live together in a cozy little cot,
Hid in a nest of roses with a fairy garden spot,
Where the vines were ever fruited and the weather ever fine,
And the birds were ever singing for that old sweetheart of mine.

When I should be her lover forever and a day,
And she my faithful sweetheart till the golden hair was gray;
And we should be so happy that when either's lips were dumb
They would not smile in heaven till the other's kiss had come.

But, Ah! my dream is broken by a step upon the stair,
And the door is softly opened and my wife is standing there!
Yet, with eagerness and rapture all my visions I resign
To greet the living presence of that old sweetheart of mine.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Chatt-Harbert.
June, with its wealth of brides and roses has recorded no prettier wedding than that of yesterday when Miss Willa Harbert became the bride of Mr. Orville Chatt, of Takamah, Nebraska.

The nuptials were solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Harbert of East 14th street, where the Rev. C. V. Dunn said the simple but sacredly beautiful service that brought this romance which dates from the University days of the contracting couple to its second and happiest phase.

Misses Violet Moore, Clarine Roach, May Guest and Sara Tunnell composed the chorus that rendered a beautiful song prior to the entry of the bridal party, and Miss Sara Tunnell gave a reading appropriate to the occasion.

The bride was attended by Miss Robbie Estes of Sulphur, and a tiny wee niece, Little Miss Martha Jo Smith, who carried a silver tray of sweet peas, among which nestled the wedding circlet.

Calloway Harbert, brother of the bride, accompanied the groom and with Miss Leone Steed at the piano softly playing the Lohengrin march, the wedding party took its place under an improvised altar of trailing vines and sweet peas.

Mrs. Chatt was reared at Roff, Okla., but with her parents moved to Ada several years ago, since which time she has been popularly identified with both the church and art circles of the town, being a gifted reader and violinist. She is a graduate of Phillips University at Enid, and of the East Central Normal class of 1916. During the term of school just closed she was teacher of Latin and English in the Ada High School.

Mr. Chatt has but recently returned from France where he saw active service with the U. S. Expeditionary force, and has resumed his law practice at Takamah, where he is also city attorney. He is a young man of splendid character, a graduate of Phillips University in both literary and law courses, and has a very promising future to share with his bride of yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chatt left on the north bound Frisco for their future home at Takamah, Nebraska, and took with them showers of good wishes from their many friends both at Ada, Roff and other Oklahoma towns where they are known.

The out of town guests of the Harbert family, for this occasion are, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Hughes and family, Mrs. J. T. J. Hughes and Miss Nettie Brandon of Roff, Mrs. Robb Estes of Sulphur and Mrs. Roy Rice of Wetumka.

CHICAGO BOY IS CLOSE SECOND TO SERGT. YORK

THERE IS A WORLD OF INTEREST IN READING ADVERTISEMENTS

Your daily newspaper is far brighter and more interesting for the advertisements it contains. You get information from them. You learn all about many little things that are of so much personal importance in your life. They keep you posted. They tell you what is new and desirable.

Sometimes they keep you from making an unwise purchase by pointing out just the reasons why one article suits your needs better than another.

Reading advertisements helps you to economize. You know that economy is not alone a matter of saving money but of spending money to advantage. Advertising identifies goods of unquestioned value.

When a store or manufacturer puts a name on goods and tells you about them you may be sure they are worth while because it does not pay to advertise merchandise that is not good.

Make a practice of reading advertisements. Read them as news from the business world published for your benefit. They will help you to live better and dress better and make more of your income in every way.

WHAT

"Revelation"

WHY?

—Because we believe it the most unusual film ever shown in Ada at popular prices.
—Because there are one thousand and ten hundred people in Ada who have not seen it.
—Because we think every person in Ada should see it for its unusual story, its remarkable star and its vivid presentation.

THE STORY:

—(Adapted from Mabel Wagnall's Novel, "The Rosebush of a Thousand Years")

"In the courtyard of a monastery years ago a pious monk planted a rosebush. In spite of his tender care it never blossomed. The gentle priest brooded over it, considering it an evidence of divine displeasure. One day, as the legend runs, he prayed at the side of the bush that it might bloom. In the midst of his supplication a gentle voice bade him, 'Be at peace,' and looking up he saw the Holy Mother standing before him—and, lo, a miracle!—the rosebush had burst into bloom."

Joline, "a daughter of joy," is a dancer in the Cabaret of Three Delights—Wine, Women and Song—in the Latin Quarter of Paris. She is an artist's model, and vividly and beautifully she poses as—

LA BACCHANTE—SALOME—SAPPHO—THE SPHINX and SIN

—And now the artist is inspired by the old legend above and must paint the Madonna of the Rosebush. Joline, the blasé little grizette, as the model? How ridiculous! How amusingly absurd! But Joline, fascinating, capricious, willful as a summer storm, in alternate tempests of anger and pleading, refuses to permit another model to take her place! She is selfish, mad, passionate, but as her soul is laid bare in love and sorrow she is tender, noble and self-sacrificing.

The Sun of Revelation strikes the heart of the madcap firefly, and as the gay, mad music of the Paris cafe gives way to the still, sweet voice of peace, a mighty miracle is wrought!

THE GREAT

NAZIMOVA

—Born in Russian Crimea, in a village by the Black Sea, Alla Nazimova studied violin and drama and was a noted child prodigy.

—Famous already in every country of Europe, she came to the New World, and in New York, speaking only Russian and giving only Russian plays, she made a furor and was acclaimed one of the world's greatest tragediennes.

—Her first picture, "WAR BRIDES," was a sensation.

—Of her work in this second of her screen productions, WLD says:

"But Nazimova—say, she just simply flashes onto the screen and owns it! She feels what she is doing and knows how to express emotion by body movements as well as the shifting of the facial muscles. Nazimova need never return to the stage if she likes the freedom of film work. Her grace and sincerity make it possible for her to dominate always without this dominance being objectionable."

"She is THERE!—and she can STAY there as long as she likes—as one of our greatest emotional film stars!"

SALES POPULAR IN LONDON.

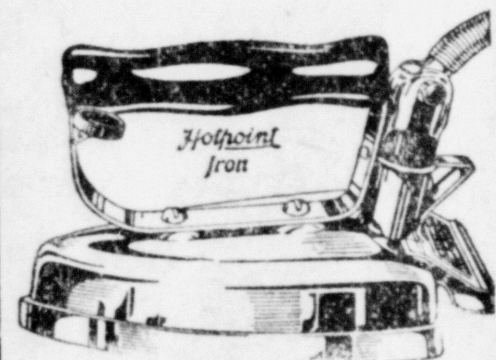

By the Associated Press
London, May 6.—The constantly advancing prices of dress material and other necessities for the female wardrobe, has caused the stores to be besieged at times when unusually attractive "sales" are on. One such sale was advertised for Monday in this week and before ten o'clock on Sunday morning one woman was waiting outside the establishment. Soon several others came with provisions and campstools. They sat throughout the whole day and night and were joined by many hundreds the next morning. Three policemen were requisitioned to restrain their rushes when the doors opened.

Henry Rawls Home.

Chief of Police John Rawls, received a telegram this morning from his brother, Henry, stating that he had arrived safely from overseas service and would be mustered out at Camp Mills, New Jersey. Mr. Rawls was with the famous Thirty-sixth Division and has no doubt seen some of the worst of the war.

Many bills are before congress to present various towns with captured German cannon. The guns will be in much safer hands than they were before and this will be a good way of disposing of them.

At all events, the rains have not been as hard and destructive as in times remembered by the old settlers, and from what can be gathered, crops have many times been less promising and then made a fine yield. While matters could be better there is plenty of time and ample reason to hope for the best. A real failure has never been seen here and there is no reason to worry at this stage of the game.

Prophets sometimes miss their mark badly. We remember it was only a few years ago that a leading politician asserted that it was simply impossible to amend the United States constitution. Since then three amendments have been ratified and the fourth, the woman suffrage amendment, will probably be submitted by the present congress. Very often the fellow posing as a prophet is merely a knocker.

About the meanest trick we ever heard about being played on imaginative editors is being perpetrated by the Carranza government of Mexico. Several who have been publishing sensational tales about the Villa revolution have been rounded up and will be taken to the scene of action to see for themselves and then tell things as they are. No doubt those fellows could write a much more readable story in the quiet of their offices where they were not hampered by facts than to tell of what they find when they go to the scene of trouble. Carranza will thus spoil some good newspaper dope by forcing those inventive geniuses to tell of conditions as they find them.

A LEMON.

The Frisco has handed the people of the Red River division a great big lemon in the new schedule. The people south of Ada gets what amounts to one train a day, so far as service is concerned. Furthermore, the new train can be flagged only at the larger points, leaving the little ones out. Ada misses the mail that formerly arrived on this train and will lose a large slice of trade due to the inability of the people south of here to make the round trip in one day. The old schedule was bad enough, but this new one is a fright. The afternoon southbound should by all means run through to Sherman as it has for the past eighteen years.

ANARCHY REARS ITS HEAD.

Again anarchy has reared its ugly head and its votaries have attempted the lives of many of the leading public men. That all escaped is little short of miraculous and there is a grain of comfort in the fact that one of the bomb planters was blown to atoms by his own bomb. The plot is designed to intimidate men who are more active in law enforcement, but it will fail. If one is killed by these lawless fiends another will be as ready to take his place and push forward his work as one soldier was ready to take the place of a fallen comrade on the battlefield. Lawlessness has always been stupid and paved the way for its own destruction and this instance will be no exception to the rule. This nation will never submit to a rule of terrorists and such outrages will have the effect of solidly cementing together all classes who will exterminate the reds and put an end to their propaganda. A long step forward will be taken when congress puts heavy restrictions on foreign immigration.

OUR SOLDIERS IN POLITICS.

Our returned soldiers deserve the fatted calf succulently roasted and accompanied by the delicacies that they like best, for they fought well and done us great honor. If the homecoming son seems strange to you, the homeland also seems a little strange to him. He is out of the steel harness; he is alive; the gas, the snipers' bullets, the weary routine, and the driving pressure of battle are behind him. He may now take a railroad train without showing a pass or traveling with the rest of the platoon under an officer's guidance; he may choose his own life; he is to look after himself instead of having someone look after him every minute. There are wings of joy on his feet and bubbles of joy beating in his head which make him giddy. He feels of himself to make sure that he is quite real in the wonder of his reincarnation in his old associations. There are intervals when he fears that he may awake to find that he has been in a dream and he is back in the Argonne.

Do you know the feelings of an athlete when he breaks training? Have you ever returned from a two weeks' holiday in the woods with new callouses on your hands, sunburned and muscle-hardened, and found yourself ill at ease at your desk? Consider having gone through months of training, not to mention rigid discipline, and being gassed and shot at! The returning soldier must be reacclimatized; he must be given time to enjoy the sheer fact of being home. Demobilization experts will understand him better if they walk sixteen miles a day and have a few boxes of firecrackers exploded under their pillows in the midst of the night and wear the gas mask to and from their offices.

Some men settle down at once. Others have to be given time to orient themselves. Some will be restless for a long time. Their travels have given them aching feet which must keep moving. We had that class in the Civil War, and it must submit to public discipline in the end, as it had to submit to army discipline. A few will be so habituated to army life that they will drift back into the army.

They have been close to realities. They will want realities, and they will pay less attention to "bunk" than before the war. Politicians who are preparing to win the soldier vote might make a note of that. After the Civil War the generals who had formed and led the brigades and divisions of volunteers became the political leaders. In this war, with the draft and full regular army control, the brigade and division commanders were regulars. They know nothing of politics. They are to the public only as soldiers.

In another generation the youth who have fought in France may do our political leading. Privates of the Argonne may be senators; they may be the employers of officers who led them. Perhaps there may be no new era. If there is, perhaps the fighters may not be the influential element; but they always have been in the eras that followed other wars. Again, there has never been such a war as this, and we never had a league of nations before. In Europe the fighters must be the leaders because all the young men were fighting. Our men who have fought have learned fellowship and service. We shall hear much from them once their roots are set in civil life.

But as the I. W. W. agitators find this sadly governed country, many of them strenuously object to being deported to their dear old homeland.

If you think your income tax is a hardship, picture what you would have been up against had William Hohenzollern won the collectorship job.

MABEL'S MISSION

By CARRIE GREENWAY.

Covington was cleaning up the desk. The upstairs girl, answering his ring for a larger waste basket, almost fell down the back stairs in her hurry to spread the news.

Covington had come to board at the Bradley's three years before, and since then no one could recall having seen the top of the desk. A little space in front, just large enough to write upon, was kept fairly clear, but for the rest Covington seemed to take a pride in the confusion he maintained and boasted that he could find anything he wanted at a moment's notice.

At the office his desk was scrupulously neat, but the roll top in his sitting room, used for his personal correspondence, was piled high with papers and books.

It might have continued so for another three years, but Covington was restless. He found the evening papers dull, the theatrical advertisements made no appeal to him, and books were intolerable.

In his restless roaming around the room his attention was attracted by the desk, and sinking into the chair he began to clean up. Here, at least, was a novel occupation, and soon he was busily engaged in reading over old letters and discarding those of no further interest.

Mabel's letters, of course, he kept in a drawer, the top one with the Yale lock. Well, perhaps it would be well to clear those out, too. Romance was dead. He had written her the proposal he seemed unable to make in person, and had added: "I shall not write again until your answer comes." That had been a fortnight ago.

His eyes caught a line in an advertisement in a theatrical paper that formed part of the litter of his desk. "Consider silence a polite negative," it ran. That was what he was doing. Mabel had not even taken the trouble to answer.

He viciously thrust the paper into the basket and caught up a letter. It was that check for his tailor. He had been positive he had mailed that; the subsequent argument had resulted in a transfer of his patronage, yet here was the check still inside. He was rather glad that he had commenced the cleaning up process.

There was another envelope under the pile of consular reports. He drew it out and his face blanched. It was the letter to Mabel. In some fashion it had slipped into the tangle on the desk. He remembered he had written a number of other letters at the same time. When he had done he snapped a rubber band about them and had given them to one of the fellows to take out.

What could she think of him? He had ceased his customary visits and had not even written. He slipped out of his house coat and into his dinner jacket. There was a telephone in the lower hall. Perhaps Mabel had not gone out.

It was her mother who answered, rather frigidly, with a certain note of disapproval in her voice. Mabel was in, but she was ill and had gone to her room. She did not think that she could see Mr. Covington.

But Covington was persistent and in the end he gained permission to call. He found her pale, with nervous lines in her face. She tried to laugh it off but he would not have it so.

"I have a special delivery message for you," he announced. "It should not have been a letter at all, but I guess I'm a sort of moral coward."

"Anyhow, I was cleaning up my desk at the house to-night and I found this. I thought it had been sent two weeks ago."

"Letters often go astray," she commented as she stretched out her hand to receive it.

"It was my fault," he said humbly. "You see, I've a desk up at the house and I've rather prided myself upon its confusion. Tonight I cleaned it up, just to have something to do, and I found this letter."

Something in his tone conveyed its import and she slowly broke the seal and glanced through the contents. At last she looked up.

"So that is the reason I have not heard from you lately," she said. "I wondered that you forgot the Apollo concert."

"That is only one count," he said humbly. "I did not bring the letter expecting that you would give the same answer I hoped for two weeks ago. I just wanted you to see that I was not quite as bad as you think I am."

"I did not give it great thought," she said, while the red, flooding her face, denied her words. "I thought that perhaps you were engrossed in some important deal."

"This is the most important 'deal' in a man's life," he laughed a little bitterly. "And I have bungled it badly."

"Pity is akin to love," she reminded, "and do you know, Frank, I think I have a mission."

"And that?" he asked hoarsely.

"To keep that desk straight," she smiled.

Did These African Savages Really Turn Into Hyenas

Out of Africa comes a wild tale unlike anything heard of since the last witch was burned two or three centuries ago. It deals with nothing less than human beings who apparently possess the power, anciently believed in, of changing into animals.

Of course, the man who tells the story isn't relating his own experiences. In that respect the yarn runs true to form. No man who beholds a ghost or a delicate bit of witchcraft was ever known to tell of it himself. Who ever heard of such a thing? The prime essential of a first-class account of the supernatural is that the evidence must be hearsay, always. So the author of this tale, which appears in the Cornhill Magazine (London), explains that the alleged facts were furnished him by a friend of his, an English officer holding an important government post in northern Nigeria. This officer, apparently having a vague impression that doubts might arise in the mind of his friend, assured him solemnly that he was free from mental disorders of any kind, and averred that the astounding things he related were nothing but the plain, unvarnished truth. Of course, you never can tell. Africa is full of tsetse flies and such whose bite is said to play havoc with the mental processes of even British officers in important government jobs, who are supposed to be habitually sober. Then, again, even army officers have been known to "string" their friends with weird yarns.

Stories of Men Turning to Animals.

The story, told for the most part in the words of the officer-friend, begins by saying that for many months the latter had been quartered alone near a native village several days distant from the nearest white settlement. Of these natives, who are constantly referred to by the officer as Pagans, he relates that sundry tales are current to the effect that they can change themselves into alligators, leopards and hyenas—at night, naturally. Such things are always done in a poor light. The officer relates further that he lived in a hut with a compound back of it in which, among other things, he kept two goats and two sheep. One night one of the goats was made "the goat" by being carried away. The next night it was the goat's turn, and it curled up and died, presumably from snake-bite. The third night a sheep was taken, and in the morning hyena tracks were found about a trap baited with the dead goat and set near the hut. To save the remaining sheep it was placed in a hut with the native boys. The account continues in the words of the officer:

Boys Much Frightened.

I was aroused about 1 a. m. by rustling grass. I crept out silently with my gun, but nothing was to be seen or heard. I walked round the compound, but found nothing unusual, so thinking that all was well, I went to bed. I was just dosing off when the "boy" whose house I had put the sheep into came and woke me up. He was very frightened, and it was some time before I could make him speak. At last he sputtered out that a hyena had come into the house and killed the sheep. I at once went out, but heard and saw nothing. But on entering the house a horrible sight presented itself. The poor sheep was standing up, but the whole of its head was gone. The lower jaw only was whole, and stuck out in a horrible manner. The wound was so clearly cut that it looked as if it had been done with a knife. I carefully examined the house, but found no marks of a struggle inside, but outside, at a joint of the grass mat, there were the well-marked tracks of a hyena.

Next night I tied up a goat which I had bought for the purpose and waited over it, sitting in a chair, quite close, but in the shadow. About 12 o'clock I heard a noise in my cook house, but nothing more happened until about 1 a. m., when I saw a moving object coming swiftly toward the goat. It was a hyena! It came with a rush, and stopped suddenly within two feet of the goat, spurring the gravel and sand up almost into my face. I raised my rifle and fired. Death Call Rings Thruout Region.

The brute fell head over heels, but rose at once and made off. I let drive my second barrel, but failed to stop him. My orderly, who was close by, immediately came out with a lamp, and we examined the ground. Blood there was in plenty, but it was too dark to follow the trail, so there was nothing left but to wait till dawn. After my two shots were fired all was quiet for about twenty-five minutes, when drums began to beat in the Pagan town, and the death-call rang through the air.

As soon as it was light I went out on the trail, easily followed by the blood alone. In the first 200 yards it led us straight toward the Pagan town, but then turned sharp

U.C.V. REUNION

AUGUST 26-7-8

VETERANS OF THE OKLAHOMA DIVISION WILL AGAIN BE THE GUESTS OF ADA.

August 26, 27 and 28 has been set as the date for reunion of the Oklahoma division of the Confederate Veterans which will be held at Ada.

This will be the fourth or fifth time that the state reunion has been held at Ada. The veterans have always spoken highly of their entertainment here and ready to come back every time an invitation is extended. The citizens of the city and county have a very high regard for the old soldiers and do their utmost to make them feel at home when they meet here. Each time the number attending is saller and the heads of the visitors whiter, but the same hearty welcome always awaits them.

GERMANS MAY GET SOME CONCESSIONS

PARIS, June 4.—Experts of the United States, France, Great Britain and Italy on the invitation of the American peace commissioners, are expected to meet as soon as possible to exchange views regarding the answer to the German counter-proposals.

President Wilson conferred today with the American commissioners and experts. Their role will be that of mediators.

Great Britain favors a number of concessions, while France remains firm in her stand to make no concessions.

At the suggestion of President Wilson, the Italian delegation held a meeting today to discuss the German counter proposals. French experts also were in session.

The commissions on various subjects such as reparations and economics, probably will meet within thirty-six hours to render reports to their respective delegations.

It is believed that as a result of the steps taken today, the reply to the German proposals will be ready within forty-eight hours. It is understood that the Americans are not adverse to minor concessions, but not to the extent favored by the British.

Let a Want Ad get it for you.

HUNS SUPREME IN LETTLAND

VON DER GOLTZ, GERMAN OFFICER, DICTATOR IN THE BALTIC RUSSIAN PROVINCE.

LONDON, May 7.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—General von der Goltz, commander of the German troops in Lettland, or Latvia, one of the formerly Russian Baltic provinces of which Libau and Riga are the chief ports, has established a virtual dictatorship in that country under the pretense that he is fighting the spread of Bolshevism among the Letts, according to the Reuter correspondent at Libau.

About the middle of April Baltic-German troops which had been operating in Lettland against the Russian Bolsheviks were withdrawn from the front back to Libau and, under the direction of the Baltic Baron Manteuffel, executed a coup d'etat, overthrowing the Lettish provisional government and arresting the Lettish cabinet. Premier Ullmanis, however, evaded arrest and found asylum under the protection of a British mission which was backed by the presence of a British warship in Libau.

The correspondent asserts that this coup d'etat "undoubtedly was carried out with the connivance of von der Goltz." It will be recalled that one Berlin newspaper has admitted that the movement was the result of an intrigue conducted by the German barons in the Baltic provinces, who, it is said, had supplied money to maintain German troops at Libau.

Von der Goltz owes his presence in Lettland at the head of a large force of purely German troops to an article of the armistice in the world war which provided that German troops should remain in Lettland until the Allies gave orders to the contrary, writes the correspondent. His close supporters are Baltic German barons who are descendants of the old Teutonic knights. They hold immense tracts of land and enjoy feudal privileges of a kind that were abolished even before the French revolution. These wealthy land-owners are extremely tenacious of their enormous privileges which they fear to see curtailed under any democratic regime, and, the correspondent says they now have entered into a conspiracy with Germany's occupying force to overthrow democracy in Lettland and prepare the way for annexation to Germany.

The Germans act as though they owned the country and they show not the slightest consciousness of having been defeated in the war, says the correspondent. To a British mission which protested against the disarming of the Lettish troops in Libau, von der Goltz replied that "the situation had been re-established," but the correspondent says there was not a word of truth in this, for arms were not restored to the Letts.

"The British mission here," writes the correspondent, "has no power to coerce the Germans into doing anything and this can only be done through the machinery of the armistice commission at Spa. The German troops are making no movement against the Bolsheviks between who and themselves they keep the river Aa."

"Von der Goltz pretends that the Letts are Bolsheviks against whom he has to guard the country."

The Lettish premier, M. Ullmanis, a refugee in the house of the British military mission, told the correspondent that England should send ammunition, food and a loan to enable the Letts to raise an army, then von der Goltz should be removed and a representative of the Allies put into control. This, he said, would break the conspiracy for German dominion.

The correspondent says he was invited by Colonel Warwick Greene, head of the American mission, to attend a conference at his house with three of the Baltic German leaders who tried hard to win the sympathies of the Americans in support of a new cabinet which they favored. Colonel Greene informed them that he could not recommend his government to recognize the situation created by the German coup d'etat so long as the Baltic troops exercised constraint and prevented the restoration of the old government or the creation of a new one by a free and fair agreement.

NEW MILL MANAGER PLEASED WITH ADA

Although he has been here less than a week, Mr. T. S. Barnes, the new manager of the Ada flour mill, is manifesting an interest in Ada equal to any old timer. He says he becomes more in love with the place every day. He with his family until they can secure a house, is staying at the home of L. E. Raines on West 16th.

Mr. Barnes comes to Ada from Glasgow, Missouri, where he was manager of a mill. When asked how long he had been at the business he stated that he was afraid to say for fear somebody would take him to be an old man. However he has been in the milling business 31 years and knows the business from A to Izzard. He states that they have nothing to give out about the plant here at present but that a great deal of additional machinery will be added and the local plant will be second to none in this part of the country. Mr. Ford of Shawnee, general manager of the local mill, is expected in Ada today at which time a statement of concrete plans will likely be announced.

Mr. T. S. Ables, miller of the Ada mill, is now in Kansas City attending the millers' convention of the United States. He was sent there by the local management in order that nothing new regarding milling should escape his attention. Mr. Ables is one of the best millers in the country, he having taken several prizes on the quality of the flour he has turned out.

JAPAN DISAPPOINTED AT DENIAL OF EQUALITY

TOKIO, April 18.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Failure of the Japanese delegates to secure the introduction of an "equality of races" clause in the League of Nations covenant caused deep disappointment throughout the Japanese nation and has led to a serious self-examination on the part of the Japanese people. The disappointment was all the more bitter because at first a dispatch came from Paris announcing the adoption of the racial clause.

Japanese who frankly discussed the problem said they could not understand on what standards Japan was judged to be a first class power. If it were merely because Japan was strong in a naval and military sense, this was not flattering to the Japanese amour-propre, who would much rather have it based on standards of civilization, capacity and culture. Yet small countries like Holland and Belgium they said are placed on a footing equal with the United States, France and England.

"We are keenly disappointed," wrote the editor of one paper. "It is as if we had tumbled from a very high precipice. We must look into our hearts, examine ourselves rigidly and see why we are not permitted to join the other nations of the world on a footing of real equality."

The Osaka Mainichi said: "The adoption of the American amendment for the Monroe Doctrine and the failure of the racial amendment affords a most glaring contrast as between a great success for the United States and a great failure for Japan."

The Tokio Asahi says, "part of the blame should be placed at the door of European and American statesmen whose political conscience has been so besotted that they do not understand or respect the principle of justice and humanity except when it is politically used to their advantages."

KEPT HER AWAKE

The Terrible Pains in Back and Sides. Cardui Gave Relief.

Marksville, La.—Mrs. Alice Johnson, of this place, writes: "For one year I suffered with an awful misery in my back and sides. My left side was hurting me all the time. The misery was something awful.

I could not do anything, not even sleep at night. It kept me awake most of the night... I took different medicines, but nothing did me any good or relieve me until I took Cardui...

I was not able to do any of my work for one year and I got worse all the time, was confined to my bed off and on. I got so bad with my back that when I stooped down I was not able to straighten up again... I decided I would try Cardui... By time I had taken the entire bottle I was feeling pretty good and could straighten up and my pains were nearly all gone.

I shall always praise Cardui. I continued taking it until I was strong and well." If you suffer from pains due to female complaints, Cardui may be just what you need. Thousands of women who once suffered in this way now praise Cardui for their present good health. Give it a trial.

MINORITY WILL BE REPRESENTED

PARIS, May 4. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Representation of minorities is assured under the new Electoral Reform Law passed by the French Parliament, which will probably bring about considerable change in the strength of parties in the Chamber of Deputies. The most recent enactment almost abolished entirely the old system of choosing members, which provided for a second ballot in case candidates did not poll an absolute majority of the votes in their constituency.

An example of what occurred under the old system during the election of 1885 in the department of the Var where the Present Premier Clemenceau was one of the candidates will serve to show how the returns will be affected by the present scheme. The Var department returns four members to the Chamber of Deputies. The Conservatives, the Opportunists, the Radicals and the Socialists each put up four candidates. At the first ballot no candidate polled an absolute majority of the 53,298 votes cast, to do which a poll of 26,890 votes would have been necessary. The Conservative candidates obtained an average of 17,333 votes each; the Opportunists, 10,954; the Radicals, 24,323, and the Socialists, 207. At the second ballot the Radical list was elected in its entirety with a majority for each candidate, the parties which polled the smallest totals having dropped out.

Under the new scheme the election would have resulted differently. As no candidate received an absolute majority of votes, 26,900, the following procedure would have been adopted:

The total number of voters who polled, 53,798, would have been divided by four—the number of seats to be filled. This would have given the quotient of 13,449. To allot the seats under the new law, the average vote of each party is divided by the quotient of the number of voters (53,798) divided by the number of candidates (4) which equals 13,449. For each time this quotient (13,449) is contained in the average vote a seat is allocated. Thus the Conservatives with an average of 17,333 get one seat and the Radicals with an average of 24,323 also get one. The remaining two seats, according to the text of the new enactment, go to the candidates of the party which polled the greatest average of votes and thus the Radicals obtain them.

As to the candidates obtaining the seats, those who polled the highest number of votes on the list of the successful parties are chosen as representatives.

It will be seen from this example that the Radicals of Var would have obtained only three seats under the new law instead of getting the whole four.

Uncle Sam's Warning to the Kaiser Bill

(Tune—"Casey Jones.")
Uncle Sam says to Germany, "You'd better shove in." The way they're killing out your men is an awful sin. I've taken things quite easy until now, I've had enough. I'm going to show you Dutchmen that My Boys are just the stuff. You've played with France and Italy—you've torn up Belgium too. But the game won't be so easy with the Red, White and Blue. My Boys are coming over, just to see you Dutchmen fall. They're strong and full of frolic, they'll give you a little call.
CHORUS.
Kaiser Bill, my boys are coming over.
Kaiser Bill, they're coming for you.
Kaiser Bill our ships will soon be sailing.
You will know them by our flag—it's the Red, White and Blue. You thought that you'd done wonders, when you built your submarines. But my boys can handle them regardless of your schemes. It's no trick to send them to the bottom of the sea. Your men will make good fish bait, but the fish won't do for me.
The Kaiser's feeling shaky with Uncle Sam on the scene. He's getting kinda scared about his little submarines. So he's going to work on sympathy and thinks our boys will yield.
When they run upon a force of big dutchwomen in the field.
CHORUS
Kaiser Bill, my boys respect a lady.
Kaiser Bill, that's not a lady's place.
Kaiser Bill, you haven't got men enough.
You'd better stop your fighting and admit your disgrace.
Before my boys reach Germany. I'm going to tell their plan.
They're going after Kaiser Bill to get Huns any way they can. Ans when they get him in their hands, they'll tell a different tale.
He'll wish he had wings, too, or could blow away in a gale.
Now Germany you're conquered, for my boys are in the game.
Where so long had stood a nation, they only leave a name.
And that reminds the people of the long long ago.
When Kaiser said he'd win the world but Uncle Sam said no.
CHORUS
Kaiser Bill, you'd better not be dreaming.
Kaiser Bill, your dreams will not come true.
Kaiser Bill, you're going to get a whipping.
Because you insulted the Red, White and Blue.

SOME GERMAN WRITERS CHEERFUL LIARS

COBLENZ, May 3. (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Some fantastic fiction is published in German newspapers by writers from Frankfurt and Leipsic who have visited Coblenz and returned home to write whatever they may please about the American army. Many of the stories they tell are new to the officers of the Third army who count them as German propaganda.

One writer of a long article in the Leipsic paper dealing with life in Coblenz relates alleged instances of ridiculous sentences imposed upon Germans by the American army courts. In one case he says that the wife of a government official, "annoyed on the street by a drunken soldier exclaimed in her anger: 'If only all the Americans would go to the devil!'" The military court, he says, punished her for "this religious wish" by sentencing her to appear every morning for thirty days at the headquarters of the commanding officer and repeating to those present the phrase: "I am glad that you are still here, gentlemen, and it is my wish that you continue to stay here for a long while."

This is all news to the American officers. If any woman appears at headquarters every morning, the sentries on duty there have failed to notice it. It is part of their job to prevent trespassing by Germans at the main entrance of the Third army headquarters.

Another fictitious tale narrated by the Leipsic writer to arouse German dislike for Americans, deals with a case in which a woman splashed by mud from an automobile ejaculated, "those dirty American automobiles." For this the Leipsic Munchausen avers, a military escort sentenced her to climb the fortress of Ehrenbrietstein daily at 5 a. m. for thirty days carrying a pail, scrubbing brush and scouring rag and clean six American automobiles. Upon completion of this task, he asserted, she was required to walk back home similarly equipped.

Another fantastic tale told by the Leipsic journalist is of a sentence which he declares was imposed upon a hotel owner whose nerves could no longer stand the "wild music" produced by the American bands and who commented upon it unfavorably. In punishment, the fiction writer claimed, the hotel man was sentenced to march daily for thirty days alongside the band and after its parade to tell its leader, "sir, your music pleases me to perfection."

American intelligence officers are endeavoring to ascertain through what channels the Leipsic correspondent obtained the alleged "information" while in Coblenz, particularly about the fines and sentences imposed upon women. Court records do not reveal any such cases.

Let a Want Ad get it for you.

S. O. S.

FRIENDS AND PATRONS:

The statements I have made show you that some of my troubles result from the demand of ice delivery in such small quantities, that the price we get does not pay for the service you want your ice delivered by noon, which means that we must have enough delivery outfits to cover the entire city in the forenoon, thus doubling the quantity that would be needed if the deliveries were distributed throughout the day, and doubling the cost of service.

The Government Food Administration, after investigating these matters, recommended the elimination of number of wasteful methods in order to avoid the necessity of increasing the price of ice, especially to working people and small consumers. These recommendations will work to your benefit, and among them are these:

That ice be distributed upon coupons to all customers as nearly as possible.

That a large part of the small sales be made from local ice boxes, or at the wagon instead of attempting delivery into houses.

These rules enable them to maintain service, and give good values, and benefits the customer, and are based upon years of experience of the people in the industry.

Also, special deliveries to residences which cost always more than the amount realized from the sale are entirely discontinued except in case of sickness.

This is the help we ask of you now: namely, BUY COUPONS, and for minimum quantities of 25 pounds—as much more as you can afford.

Push Business Hard ADVERTISE!

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Advertising will develop the dormant demand for the goods on the shelves of merchants and in the warehouses of manufacturers.

Mr. Merchant and Mr. Manufacturer, the public wants and needs the things you have to sell and is willing to pay for them.

Tell your story through the medium of well prepared advertising. Talk to thousands through your local press instead of standing idly by and waiting for something to "turn up."

Now, more than ever before, advertising offers greater assurance of profitable returns to live, wide-awake, progressive merchants and manufacturers who employ it.

The message of the Department of Labor is: Advertise—increase your advertising—so that selling costs may be reduced and ultimately prices will follow in reduction.

ROFF MAY GET SANITARIUM

DR. LEWIS DEMANDS BETTER
ROAD TO ADA AS ONE
PRIME CONDITION.

Roff may yet secure the state tuberculosis sanitarium for which it has been working for some months past. Dr. A. R. Lewis, on whose recommendation it will be located, reported adversely on Roff on the occasion of his first visit of inspection. When pressed by Senator Harrison for his reasons he stated that the lack of adequate hotel facilities and the road to Ada were the worst obstacles.

Roff citizens are planning to remedy the hotel situation and Dr. Lewis asked that Senator Harrison and P. A. Norris, who has been active in the matter, pledge the construction of a good road to Ada in case the sanitarium is located at Roff. They have done this and have sent copies of the contract to Roff and Fitzhugh to be signed by those interested in a better road and who will pledge themselves to see that one is built that will meet the required standard. This may result in giving Roff the sanitarium in the near future when Dr. Lewis again inspects the proposed site.

A Kingdom of Straws for your Crown

A man hates to pick out a straw hat from a last straw selection and we'd hate to have him think that there was anything small about us.

Our Straw Hat stock is therefore large. We have more hats than last year and piles of style and comfort in every single number.

We have even been accused of showing more shapes than a Millinery shop.

We're well pleased with the compliment.
